Synergistic Activities

1. Communicating the results of scholarly research to a general audience through publications with public-facing blogs like the Monkey Cage at the Washington Post, The Conversation, Political Violence @ a Glance, and the Duck of Minerva.
2. Teaching graduate-level courses on international security and research methodology to mid-career military officers in the United States Army through the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, KS who are currently enrolled in the Security Studies MA and PhD programs at Kansas State University. The Security Studies Program at Kansas State was created over 15 years ago to help educate mid-career Army officers stationed at Ft. Leavenworth.
3. Briefing the Director of Global Posture, Plans & Posture in the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy on preliminary results from our Minerva Grant research on public views of US bases military deployments overseas.
4. Writing, maintaining, and updating the "troopdata" software package for the R statistical software platform to help researchers more easily access data on US military overseas deployments. This software package currently has over 9,600 downloads from the Comprehensive R Archive Network (CRAN) repository.
5. Organized a workshop on military deployments and security cooperation with Vito D'Orazio for the fall 2021 Peace Science Society International Conference. This workshop was aimed at bringing together scholars working on issues related to deployments, basing, and other emerging issues related to the use of military personnel to project power. The conference ended up being cancelled due to Covid.
